

Galileo (Someone Like You)

Josh Groban

Galileo fell in love as a Galilean boy
And he wondered what in heaven
Who invented such a joy But the question got the better
Of his scientific mind
And to his blind and dying days
He looked up high and often sighed
And sometimes cried Who puts the rainbow in the sky?
Who lights the stars at night?
Who dreamt up someone so divine?
Someone like you and made them mine
Love can make you ask
Some funny questions now and then
But just remember the alternatives
For I remember when I was lonely and unhappy
And my lips were cold as ice
And you kissed me and good heavens
Now I'm here in paradise So if ever I'm not kissing you
Or looking in your eyes
I won't be blind and I won't cry
I'll look up high and gladly sigh
And thank the guy
Who puts the rainbow in the sky?
Who lights the stars at night?
Who dreamt up someone so divine?
Someone like you and made them mine
Someone like you and made them mine
