

I Left My Body and Never Came Back

The Elms

You know, I can't forget what I saw the last
The bright red dress and the yellow sash
The cold blew in with the past the day
I left my body and never came back Was in my tenth grade year when I lost my love
She told me that she'd had enough
The cold blew in and it burned the day
I left my body and never returned
Left my body and never returned
And you watch your baby become a lady
Then you cry but maybe then
You'll get a chance again I brought an open heart and a big bouquet
The perfect gift for a summer day
You never know when you'll become a man
I left that flower and never came back
Left that flower and never came back And you watch your baby become a lady
And you cry but maybe then
You'll get a chance again And you watch your baby become a lady
And you cry but maybe
She'll get a chance to save me
In the time she kissed me
She became my history
I would kill to try again
I'll get a chance again
