I Will Return

The Black Dahlia Murder

When death so swiftly has coveted
The client from this plane
A journey forged in ice has just begun
A crystal line, entombment, preservation now awaits
Proceedings executed, hastily deceased to be encased
Encapsulated, ensured, the precious cargo safe

A pending resurrection rebirthIn the distant future, when advancements shall allow

A being to be made again anew
The brain to be implanted
Fused within a growth of cells
This vessel but a vehicle

To traverse this mortal realmPressurized, sealed in, ward off the mounting days

Retain, revived, rebirthed beyond the grave

Jealousy - some say it's sickening
They merely can't afford this highest form of luxury

To live again
To carry on the will, elite
To live again

Advancing through the centuriesUntil the sky is black and the sun it never shows

Til the whipping winds of nuclear winter cruelly blow

The gift of immortality has been bestowed I will return, I will returnCryonics! Reanimate this life

Remake the fleshy juggernaut In which the mind will ride

Cryonics! A wisdom is preserved

Frozen forever, evolutionary curve

O, a renaissance of mad technology

Segregate the wise, eliminate the weak

O painstaking process, onward we weed

Reproduce the strong, eliminate

Heresy, some say it's blasphemy

Assuring I'll be in Hell when God is through with me

To live again, to forge yourself anew

To live again, to face the Godless truth

Foolery, some say it'll never be

Fear will condemn such radical ideology

To live again, to stand above your brood

To live again, the phoenix raised, unbruised

Lyrics provided by http://www.1songlyrics.com/