

Promises

Ryn Weaver

Never meant to break my own promises
Never meant to break my own promises Promises, just promises
Promises, just promises Again, the excuses and generally wasting my time
I'm finding solutions, just seeking my peace of mind
No hocus or pocus, my focus is drunk on the floor
And mumbling something about one more,
Oh, falling across the line
Keep punching petals at the ember light
And I cross my heart and hope to die
Unless I happen to lie, I
Never meant to break my own promises
Never meant to break my own promises
One more night, I said it the last time
This is the last time, say it and now once more
Never meant to break my own promises Break my own promises
Promises, just promises
Promises, just promises I said I was trying, I really was driving the coast
The fight or the flight, well I side with the latter most
It almost is laughable but when I chuckle I choke
Can't get the words out my throat of one more
Is that my lion's pride, I meet my mountain then I run and hide
And I cross my heart and hope to die
Unless I happen to lie
Never meant to break my own promises
Never meant to break my own promises
One more night, I said it the last time
This is the last time, say it and now once more
Never meant to break my own promises Break my own promises
Promises, just promises
Promises, just promises

Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by <http://www.1songlyrics.com/>