

Clockwatching

Jason Mraz

Take off, both your, shoes and clothes, I'll follow
Undo, corkscrew, drink from the half of a broken bottle
Lately we're running out of time, aren't we? Smoking, often, and calling out our guilty pleasures
Let's keep, talking, anything to stop clockwatching
Lately we're running out of time, aren't we?
Crazy for running all the time, m-m-m-m-maybe
Let's forget we're running out of time I'm off like an aeroplane
I'm licking your postage stamp again
I'm using my right brain and I'm praying that we don't crash
Who knew I'd cum so fast
Well, so what if a two pump chump can't last
But I made it to three, and I foreclose a five minute fantasy
On a short-lived flight, making love on economy
No jumping, conclusions
'An I don't think there's no solution
Let's get, backwards
And forget our restless destination Let's live in the moment just this time, could we?
Just take one moment of our time, m-m-m-m-maybe
Let's forget we're running out of time I'm off like an aeroplane
I'm catching my second wind again
I'm using my left brain
And I'm righting all my wrongs
I'm yearning to turn you on I've been working on getting you off, so get on board, now Well how can I guess by the subject of the best predicate that's left unsaid when the matter is too delicate
My loneliness is evident
And it's you
You're running through my mind and it makes me c-c-crazy cra-cra-crazy La la la
La la la la la
La la la (ooooo, it's so amazing)
La la la la la la
La la la
Laaaa oh oh
Laaaaaa lo oh oh oh Lady, dreamer, you might be the soundest sleeper
Tonight, sleep tight, and build your nest upon my shoulder
Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by <http://www.1songlyrics.com/>