

I Will Be Waiting

Let's Eat Grandma

The feeling when your head gets You'll know it when your head gets surreal
So feel it in the best way
And call it when the moment's revealed
And then you'll let your chest breathe
And your head stream
And make headway for your daydreams
And there's thinking
You try to excavate the feelings but they'd stay in It's like the rhythm of the beat is just a feeling
But there's no need to feel the way that it does
When you're running and you feel so above it
And there's reason why we are redone
So pull yourself into the wind and say
I will be waiting for you, I
I will be waiting for you, I
It's lame, but I will keep waiting for you
It's lame, but I will be waiting So pull yourself together now
Pull it all together now
Open up your head until your tears are streaming out
Then there'll be people in the line
Now spinning safely by my side
'Cause then our hands are at the corner of your desk until the ink runs out And then you'll see yourself in the mirror of the piles of people singing out that that's the way, 'cause that's the way now All your leaves will change with season, count to eight to hear the gleaming But be prepared 'cause when you see it, everything will start competing
And I will be waiting for you, I
I will be waiting for you, I
It's late, but I will keep waiting for you
It's late, but I will be waiting I will be waiting for you
And for the first time, it's just the first time
I will be waiting for you
And for the first time, it's just the first time I figured out
I will be waiting for you
And for the first time, it's just the first time
I will be waiting for you
And for the first time, it's just the first time I figured out
And for the first time, it's just the first time

And for the first time, it's just the first time I figured out

Lyrics provided by <http://www.1songlyrics.com/>