

Relinquished

Job for a Cowboy

Her mouth stands to convey swarms of plague
Time slowly corrodes as her jaws have locked into place
At the grips of her own hands
This woman carries her victims to their passing They hold back tight
For when this woman arches back
Her skin sheds from her bare limbs
Her own flesh begins to pile at her own feet This disease continues to dilate as it immerses through the air
She can no longer hide what she is Contamination grows in the town where she lays and sleeps
She can no longer hide what she is
Her people before her beg only for forgiveness
As their flesh begins to peel from their bodies
Their flesh pile at their own feet
