

Particle

Hundred Waters

I only wanted a haven in your harbor
I only wanted a part of you
But you had to walk in, take all of my possessions
Any day, any day, drifting farther and farther away, hey I'm only a particle, a drop in you, forever dissolving
Look at us revolving in a glass, intact and trapped
And you can keep it all at bay, always an arm's length away
But one of us is changing
Read between the lines, don't ask me to repeat it
What's that?
You're breaking up
I only wanted some kind of consolation
Now I'm going somewhere out of view
'Cause it's just too much, too much light in the sky
An expired constellation way up there
Are you there drifting farther and farther away?
Farther away, farther away, farther away, farther away...
Scared of letting go, stay the same route
Someone tell me where to go if I get locked out I'm only a particle, a drop in you, forever dissolving
Look at us revolving in a glass, intact and trapped
And you can keep it all at bay, always an arm's length away
But what are we exchanging?
Read between the lines, don't ask me to repeat it
What's that?
You're breaking up
I only wanted someone to rely on
I only wanted a point of view
Now it's just too much, too much light in the sky
An expired constellation way up there
Are you there drifting farther and farther away?
I can't hear you now, I can't hear you now (how should I know?)
Scared of letting go, stay the same route
Someone tell me where to go if I, if I get locked out Don't ask me to repeat it
What's that?
Are we breaking up?
