Prairie Dog (Remix By Maxwell House)

Laika

Prairie now isn't that a pretty word
Rolls off the tongue like a setting sun
You should have heard what I heard
A shriek a syllable a sleight of handPrairie now isn't that a lonely word
Slips through the hands like a falling star
You should have seen what I saw
A mask an artifice a skillful smearIf I could pull the nerves from my skin

If I could pull the nerves from my skin

I would

Prairie now isn't that an evil word Trips on its feet like a slouching beast Surely things will change now

A start a plan a place to goIf I could pull the nerves from my skin

If I could pull the nerves from my skin

I wouldPrairie now isn't that a pretty word

Rolls off the tongue like a setting sun

You should have heard what I heard

A shriek a syllable a sleight of hand

Surely things will change now

Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by http://www.1songlyrics.com/