

You Ain't Right

Randy Travis

If you can't buy groceries this week
Lost your [Incomprehensible] check down on a big screen
You ain't right And you're thirty without a job
And you're still livin' with your mom
You ain't right You go to your great uncle's wake
And you leave there with a hot date
Find a deer on the side of the road
Check his pulse and then you take him home If you gotta leave early from the bar
'Cause your kids are waitin' out in the car
You ain't right
You ain't right, say the least you're different
A couple quarts shy and a few screws missin'
Bless your heart, look around
We're all an ounce or two short of a pound Lord knows you're not alone
We're all a little wrong
But you ain't right If your truck costs more than your house
Your girlfriend don't know about your spouse
You ain't right Or if you're past old enough to drive
And still strugglin' through junior high
You ain't right Hey, if your wife's home mowin' the lawn
While you're fishin' all weekend long
Or you show up late for church
Smellin' like beer on a white pewter shirt
And when the offering plate comes by
You put in a ten and take back a five
You ain't right Son, you ain't right, say the least you're different
A couple quarts shy and a few screws missin'
Bless your heart, look around
We're all an ounce or two short of a pound Lord knows you're not alone
We're all a little wrong
But you ain't right Hey, you ain't right, say the least you're different
A couple quarts shy and a few screws missin'
Bless your heart, look around
We're all an ounce or two short of a pound Lord knows you're not alone
We're all a little wrong
But you ain't right Son, your lights maybe on
But you're not always at home
And we're all a little wrong
But you ain't right
