Only Superstition

Coldplay

A copper coin I see has found its way to me It's old and it's old and it's old Making me cry I sleep but I will not move Too scared to leave my room But I won't be defeated, oh no What if cars don't go my way? And it's sure to spoil my day But in voices loud and clear You say to me it's only superstition It's only your imagination It's only all of the things that you fear And the things from which you can't escape Keep clean for the thousandth time Stand still and wait in line Some numbers are badder than others, oh no What if cars don't go my way? And it's sure to spoil my dayBut in voices loud and clear You say to me it's only superstition It's only your imagination It's only all of the things that you fear And the things from which you cannot escape But it's making me cry, and it's making me cry And I'm slipping away and I'm slipping away It's only superstition, only your imagination It's only superstition, only superstition Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by http://www.1songlyrics.com/