No Place Like Home (feat. Jones)

HONNE

I've been lost before, but never for a week
At the forty-second floor of this apartment street
I'm confined between these walls, six-hundred feet
I've been lost, I've been lost before, I don't wanna repeatAnd it's 2am in Tokyo,

Yeah I'm fucking far from my own home

And I'm tired of this hotel room And the building's like a bag or two

And the building's like a bag of two

All these noises I don't recognize

A night to ride, for you and I

It's so hard for me to feel alone,

And I have heard there really is no place like home. I've been lost before, but never on the streets
I'd tell you how I felt, but I'm too scared to speak

I can't get this straight line, I wish I could see

I've been lost, I've been lost before, I don't wanna repeat

And it's 2am in Tokyo,

And I'm waiting far from my own home

And I'm tired of this hotel room

And the building's like a bag or two

All these noises I don't recognize

A night to ride, for you and I

It's so hard for me to feel alone,

No, and I have heard there really is no place like home.

No, there really is no place like home

No, there really is no place like home

There really is no place like home
