

They're Like Ghosts

Somi

They're like ghosts, these old lovers, glowing in my dreams twilight
Singing with the sweet familiar, out of reach and out of sight
My heart feels like an old museum, hanging pictures one by one
When the night falls I remember all the ways my heart was one
They're like ghosts, these old lovers, slipping through my heart's window
Haunting me with the memories of a romance long ago
Whispering songs of where they are now, what and would've could've been
When the night falls I remember the many times I've come undone I'm not afraid of you
I'm not afraid of you
I ain't afraid of not being happy too
I ain't afraid of not getting over you
I ain't afraid of being alone
Yes I ain't afraid of being alone
Yes I ain't afraid of not haunting you, too
They're like ghosts these old lovers, peeking in from time to time
Wonder what passed between us, still weighs heavy on my mind
Is there something I should've done?
Was there something I didn't do? When the sun returns and I remember -
Everything.
