They're Like Ghosts

Somi

They're like ghosts, these old lovers, glowing in my dreams twilight Singing with the sweet familiar, out of reach and out of sight My heart feels like an old museum, hanging pictures one by one When the night falls I remember all the ways my heart was one They're like ghosts, these old lovers, slipping through my heart's window Haunting me with the memories of a romance long ago Whispering songs of where they are now, what and would've could've been When the night falls I remember the many times I've come undoneI'm not afraid of you I'm not afraid of you I ain't afraid of not being happy too I ain't afraid of not getting over you I ain't afraid of being alone Yes I ain't afraid of being alone Yes I ain't afraid of not haunting you, too They're like ghosts these old lovers, peeking in from time to time Wonder what passed between us, still weighs heavy on my mind Is there something I should've done? Was there something I didn't do? When the sun returns and I remember -
