

Snakes & Ladders

Let's Eat Grandma

As it starts I begin to open fire
How much do I have to overlap the lines
'Cause I've grown to understand you're resigned
Oh, I'll still sit and wait for it, oh, do a line, noBut you don't depend on me like I do, and I do
And you don't depend on me like I do, and I doAnd you bite me, my tutu winds inside me
Don't mind me, you'll find me head-to-toe in bright green
So on my knee, I'm at your feet
And finally I've been givin' in, so lay your cards down
And give it up if I don't know how
And you feel so respected with just things
I'm addicted to things that are bold and bright
To selecting the tins that you're pouring your tears into Brains, oh, God, it turns out that it wasn't true
'Cause it's so consuming, the time that they're losing
As I'm just awasting, so wasted
Not breathing, just writhing to
'Cause you don't depend on me like I, I do
But you will depend on me like I, I doTonight, I've been away, I've been starting to trace Between what is sin now and what we could feel
And be endlessly, and before we know it
It feels like the real thing that oh we treasureBut it feels like we're stuck in the everglades
Trying to run through life, but we get nowhere
Like we're searching across the savannah
To fill our cavities, up with silver grains
And it feels like we're falling to Saturn
Just a milky star in an empty space
And it looks like we'll never come down
All the green clouds fucked up the sky
But now nothing can smash our glass eyes
Silicon rich, catching your drifts
Going farther into the near depth
Jupiter, Mercury, so we rot away
(Where is our power, power, power)
Give me something real, something evergreen, something unmundane
(Where is our power, power, power)
Give me something sweet, something so pristine,
And it feels like we've fallen in love with it
Well of course we have, have you lost yourself?
