Decks Dark

Radiohead

Then into your life, there comes a darkness There's a spacecraft blocking out the sky And there's nowhere to hide You run to the back and you cover your ears But it's the loudest sound you've ever heard And all we trapped ragdoll cloth people We are helpless to resist Into our darkest hour But it was just a laugh, just a laugh Just a laugh, just a laugh Even at this angle And so we crumble A ten ton head, made of wet sand This dread circumference You've gotta be kidding me The grass grows over me Your face in the glass, in the glass It was just a laugh, just a laugh It's whatever you say it is In split infinitiesThen into your life, there comes a darkness And a spacecraft blocking out the sky And there's nowhere to hide You run to the back and you cover your ears But it's the loudest sound you've ever heard Into your darkest hour When you've had enough of me When you've had enough of me Sweet times When you've had enough of me When you've had enough of me Sweet times
