War

Poets of the Fall

Do you remember standing on a broken field
White crippled wings beating the sky
The harbingers of war with their nature revealed
And our chances flowing byIf I can let the memory heal
I will remember you with me on that fieldWhen I thought that I fought this war alone
You were there by my side on the frontline
When I thought that I fought without a cause
You gave me a reason to tryTurn the page I need to see something new
For now my innocence is torn
We cannot linger on this stunted view
Like rabid dogs of war
I will let the memory heal

I'll remember you with me on that fieldWhen I thought that I fought this war alone

You were there by my side on the frontline

And we fought to believe the impossible

When I thought that I fought this war alone

We were one with our destinies entwined

When I thought that I fought without a cause

You gave me the reason why With no-one wearing their real face

It's a whiteout of emotion

And I've only got my brittle bones to break the fallWhen the love in letters fade

It's like moving in slow motion

And we're already too late if we arrive at allAnd then we're caught up in the arms race
An involuntary addiction

And we're shedding every value our mothers taught

So will you please show me your real face

Draw the line in the horizon

Cos I only need your name to call the reasons why I fought

When I thought that I fought this war alone...

You were there by my side on the frontline

And we fought to believe the impossible

When I thought that I fought this war alone

We were one with our destinies entwined

When I thought that I fought without a cause

You gave me the reason why
