

Quite Unusual

Front 242

The sun went down and the ground started sort of grinding
A blinding light tore across the sky
A cyclone swept the landscape out and left it completely flattened out And several twirls of smoke unfolded like gigantic flowers
The way the morning broke was quite unusual I should have wakened up at once, but this was no concern of mine, so I kept on dreaming My eyes roamed over the burning ruins In less time than it takes to tell
And I felt like
And I felt like being numbed,
I felt like mesmerized
The way the morning broke was quite unusual
More than words can say
In less time than it takes to tell
