

World Citizen

David Sylvian & Ryuichi Sakamoto

What happened here?
The butterfly has lost its wings
The air's too thick to breathe
And there's something in the drinking water. The sun comes up
The sun comes up and you're alone
Your sense of purpose come undone
The traffic tails back to the maze on 101 And the news from the sky
Is looking better for today
In every single way
But not for you World citizen World citizen
It's not safe
All the yellow birds are sleeping
Cos the air's not fit for breathing
It's not safe Why can't we be Without beginning, without end?
Why can't we be? World citizen World citizen And if I stop
And talk with you awhile
I'm overwhelmed by the scale
Of everything you feel
The lonely inner state emergency I want to feel
Until my heart can take no more
And there's nothing in this world I wouldn't give
I want to break
The indifference of the days
I want a conscience that will keep me wide awake I won't be disappointed
I won't be disappointed
I won't be. I saw a face
It was a face I didn't know
Her sadness told me everything about my own Can't let it be
When least expected there she is Gone the time and space that separates us And I'm not safe
I think I need a second skin
No, I'm not safe World citizen World citizen I want to travel by night
Across the steppes and over seas
I want to understand the cost
Of everything that's lost
I want to pronounce all their names correctly World citizen World citizen I won't be disappointed
I won't be. She doesn't laugh
We've gone from comedy to commerce
And she doesn't feel the ground she walks upon I turn away
And I'm not sleeping well at night
And while I know this isn't right

What can you do?
