James Galway, Richard Cottle, Laurence Cottle, Ian Thomas,
John Parricelli, Neil Angilley, John Grah

Ever the hero you won't break
Weak and strong
Ever the hero you won't break
Weak and strong
Weak and strong You've got to love your brother like you don't love yourself
You've got to change
You've got to love your brother like you don't love yourself
You've got to change
You've got to change You think you're strong
Cutting off love like an amputee
You're not alone
We all want love without the grief
Ever the hero you won't break
Weak and strong
Ever the hero you won't break You're not alone
We can relate to your insecurities
You think you're strong
Measure your courage in empathy Ever the hero you won't break
Weak and strong
Ever the hero you won't break
Weak and strong You've got to love your brother like you don't love yourself
You've got to change
You've got to love your brother like you don't love yourself
You've got to change
You've got to change
You've got to change
Right, wrong, maybe
Option one's the dangerous one
And I'll bet, and I'll bet, and I'll bet
And I'll bet, I'll bet And I'll bet you make us strong
And I'll bet you make us strong
Love's the dangerous one And I'll bet, and I'll bet, and I'll bet
And I'll bet, I'll bet Another hero, another hero, another her
Makes another villain
Another hero, another hard on, another right on
Makes another villain You've got to love your brother like you don't love yourself
You've got to love your brother like you don't love yourself
You've got to love your brother like you don't love yourself
You've got to change
You've got to change
