

Halfway Home

Jason Mraz

Well I used to walk along the opposite side of the road and made others get out of my way
I used to think that I could sit and wait for the times but I know I should meet them halfway I'm halfway home and I'm on my own
I'm halfway there and I don't care, I don't mind
I plan to leave here after supper time
That's when traffic is light, all I need is a sign
And I'll be alright. I'll be fine Well I used to think that i could just sleep and then I would dream
And everything it would just come to me
Until I woke one day without anything to eat
Lying on the opposite side of the street
I'm halfway home and I'm still out on my own
I'm halfway there and I don't care, I don't mind
Because it ain't my time not to stay or say
Well I can't say, but you can bet that i will play my heart out
I'll won't lay. I used to think that I could just sit and wait for the times
But I know I gotta meet them somewhere out there halfway I'm halfway home I tried running with the flow
I'm halfway there. Ain't it funny how everybody seems to care
I planned to get there around supper time their serving up bread and wine
All I needed was a sign and I guess I'll be alright.
I'll be fine.
I'll be fine.
I'll be alright.
I'll be alright.
(It seems to be a running theme about being fine and alright but I don't mind)
Because I'll be fine and alright
I'll be fine
I'll be fine
