All Those Pretty Lights

Andrew Belle

The wind blows through your hair As you're walking people stare

Up the block and down the street to North King's highwayAnd there's a beating in my chest And it's seeming to suggest

That before this day is through it might go my wayAnd so I sit back in my seat I scribble down something that's sweet about a boy

A girl

An endless stretch of scenery'Cause it's like falling to your knees before a stranger on the street I did it just the other day

You should have seen me

Oh

And I wanna remember this night
And how my words never came out right
It's just my patience that keeps me alive
Just like all those pretty lights

Just like all the pretty lights in the skyThere's something to be said about the colors in your head And how they mix to form the perfect shade of sadnessNot because of things I've done or any of the songs I've sung

It's just the story of our lives

We wish we had thisOh

And I wanna remember this night

And how my words never came out right

It's just my patience that keeps me alive

Just like all those pretty lightsJust like all the pretty lights in the sky

And I remember we stayed up way past your bedtime

Up on the second floor

Down by my sliding doorJust innocent kids in a victimless crime

Trapped in a metaphor

HHping for something moreAnd I wanna remember this night

And how my words never came out right

It's just my patience that keeps me alive

Ohi

Just like all those pretty lights
Just like all the pretty lights in the skyOh
And I wanna remember this night
And how my words never came out right
It's just my patience that keeps me alive

Oh

Just like all those pretty lights

Just like all the pretty lights in the skyIn the sky

Just like all those pretty lights

Just like all those pretty lights Just like all the pretty lights in the sky
