

Fingerprints (Nai Palm, Simon Mavin) [Commentary]

Hiatus Kaiyote

Broken memories they taught me like a bird caged by scorched wings

Puzzle pieces missing

The grubby fingerprints that kissed the walls have vanished

Like the wind without her whisperings and the colours wept from all the tapestries would be left nothing but sullen imagery

The uncertainty of forgotten things

The pheonix she dies with her wings burning she sinks from the sky to the earth returning but she will rise through ashes singing

With new wisdeom she flies to a new beginning
